The Division seeks to develop a better understanding of the fundamental properties of computer and network systems and to create better abstractions and tools for designing, building, analyzing and measuring future systems. Additional information about CNS and their programs can be found at <http://www.nsf.gov/home/cise/>.

The Computer Research Infrastructure Cluster supports the building of prototypes and test beds necessary to experimental computing by providing resources for the acquisition, enhancement, and operation of experimental facilities for all CISE research and education areas.

Initial assignments under the IPA mechanism may be made for a period of one to two years, and may be extended for a third year. Individuals eligible for an IPA assignment include employees of State and local government agencies, institutions of higher education, Indian tribal governments, federally funded research and development centers and qualified non-profit organizations involved in public management in instances where such assignments would be of mutual benefit to the organizations involved. The individual remains an employee of the home institution and cost-sharing arrangements are generally negotiated between NSF and the home institution.

Manages and monitors on-going grants, contracts, interagency and cooperative agreements to ensure fulfillment of commitments to NSF. Evaluates progress of awards through review and evaluation of reports and publications submitted by awardees and/or meetings at NSF and during site visits. Also desirable is knowledge of the general scientific community, skill in written communication and preparation of technical reports, ability to communicate orally, and several years of successful independent research of the kind normally expected of the academic rank of associate professor or higher. All assignees are expected to function effectively both within specific programs as well as in team mode, contributing and coordinating with organizations in the Directorate, across the Foundation, and with other Federal and State government agencies and private-sector organizations.
